Measles Reemerges in Vietnam

Feb 28, 2014 | Colleen Nguyen | Outbreak News

- ❖ Since the beginning of 2014, Viet Nam has reported more than 3,500 confirmed measles infections.
- ❖ More than 86% of those infected have not been immunized or their vaccination status is unknown.
- ❖ In Hanoi, the National Paediatric Hospital has treated more than 1,280 measles patients and over 100 children have died from measles related complications.
- ❖ Among those who died, half of the children were less than nine months old.

Vietnam measles outbreak kills more than 100 people, mostly children

Hanoi: Vietnam is scrambling to contain a deadly outbreak of measles that has killed more than 100 people, mostly young children, and infected thousands more this year, the government says.

At least 112 people - the majority of them under 10 years old - have died of the disease so far in 2014, the Ministry of Health said on Friday in a statement.

I can only pray that things will be OK

It warned that the number of deaths could rise because of cross-infections, bad weather and overcrowding at paediatrics hospitals in major cities where panicked parents are bringing their infected children.
